

The betting market

Over-rounding: How to get value

A bookmaker will shorten his odds when he opens his book. Either on Morning Prices or the mark up prices as he opens his book on the racecourse. He will have been professionally advised as to individual horses chances of winning the race on a percentage basis. Evaluation win percentage against price are shown in the table

These are the values each horse is worth based upon current form. To cover himself the bookmaker will cut back these prices for his first show.

The table columns above explained -

Price =	early/morning price offered by bookmaker
EP% =	the early morning win percentage this represents
TR% =	the true win percentage of the horse
BP =	the price to place a bet

You can use the figures in the table above as you wish but this is the way I use it - Note any horse opening up on a racecourse or at a bookmaker between the odds of evens and 5/2. I have marked these in bold on the above chart. Check the table to see if any horse drifts to the BP column price (the price to place a bet). If any horse does drift in price to the BP column odds then place your wager on this horse.

This way you can guarantee you are getting a value price and not taking under the odds!
